Once more it is to be said with perfect truth that many owners and trainers give too much time to poker-playing in the stables and too little time to the proper support of the best interests of the turf. If owners and trainers continue to disappoint the racing associations and the public by unreasonable and excessive withdrawais of horses from the announced lists of probable starters, then it will certainly be necessary for the racing associations to adopt strong measures to protect themselves and to protect the public which supports the race-tracks, by imposing heavy fines on owners and trainers who withdraw their horses without furnishing ample and satisfactory explanations for such withdrawals.

R. D. WRENN IS STILL THE LAWN TEN-NIS CHAMPION.

HE DEFEATED EAVES, THE ENGLISHMAN, YES-TERDAY IN A FIVE-SET MATCH AND

PREVENTED THE TITLE FROM

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26.-Eaves was beaten here this morning by Wrenn, the American champion, and the foreigner was not beaten until five sets had been played. All the conditions were favorable for fine tennis. The visitor said after the match that he considered Wrenn to be a great player, and 1td not begrudge him his victory Eaves was rather upset, however, by Wrenn's con stantly stopping between games to clean out th fairly outplayed his rival, and the victory was his because of his greater skill at overhead volleying and smashing. Wrenn's play was faster, too, although perhaps not so deadly accurate, and, excep poorly, he was fully as steady as the foreigner.

The first set found the American slow and his service weak, and Eaves soon got a lead that Wrenn could not make up. In the second, however, he made a plucky uphill fight after the score was 8-6. A short rest was taken after this, and then the players came out for the third set Wrenn seemed to be in better condition. He began rushing tactics at once, and came in to the net on every service and on most of his returns. From the start he kept a lead on this set, and Eaves's uphill play toward the end was too late to save it.

Eaves steadled down and ran five straight games, taking the set by 6-2.

The fifth set was attended by the greatest enthusiasm ever seen at an American tennis tournament. Naturally, Wrenn was a strong favorite with the crowd, and they noisily demonstrated their choice, even going so far as to hiss a linesman who decided a doubtful point in Eaves's favor, and also cheering the Englishman's errors pretty liberally. Wrenn took the first two games, and then Eaves got the third. The fourth was long and exciting, and when Wrenn finally got the last point that gave him a lead of 3-1 the big crowd cheered wildly. Eaves then struck a had streak and the next two games went to Wrenn in the eastest kind of fashion. The Englishman made error after error, and the American simply kept on rushing to the net and volleying across the court for clean aces. With the score 5-1 in his favor Wrenn lost the seventh game, but ran out the set and match a moment later with the eighth. The score in detail follows.
